It is North Seattle College's policy that all students under the age of 18 live with a homestay family in order to ensure their safety and security while attending classes in the United States. North Seattle College strongly recommends that parents keep their children in a homestay where they can be monitored and cared for until they are 18 years old in the United States, and legally considered adults. In many cases living alone in an apartment or living with older friends may not be an appropriate environment for 16 and 17 year old students.

If parents decide to allow their underage child to live anywhere other than with a homestay family, the parents must complete and submit a Parental Waiver section.

_____ as the parent of _____Name of Parent*Name of Student*Parental Waiver

I hereby grant permission for my child to arrange for housing in an apartment/home share etc. contrary to North Seattle College's policy that all underage students reside with a homestay. I fully understand the consequences of allowing my underage child to live unsupervised and release North Seattle College from any and all liabilities in regards to any harm that may come to my child as a result of my choosing to disregard their underage homestay policy.
